TANG SHAO-YI SCORNS EVEN TO LOOK AT JAPAN TREATIES!

GERMAN RIGHTS IN SHANTUNG GO TO THE JAPANESE

American Senate Votes, 55 To 35, Against Any Treaty Change

DECISION CLEAR

Japan Is Under Verbal Promise To Return Kiaochau To China

SECRET TREATIES

No Change Possible Under Anglo-French War Agreement

(Reuter's Service)

New York—a bulletin undated—The Senate rejected the Shantung amendment by 55 to 35 votes.

[In August, after its hearings on the Peace Treaty, the Foreign Relations Committee of the Senate presented its report recommending that the German rights in Shantung be awarded to China instead of to Japan. If the Senate had agreed to this, the whole Treaty of Peace and with it the Covenant of the League of Nations would have been re-opened, according to President Wilson. The President has fought from start to finish for ratification of the Treaty and Covenant as they were agreed upon at Paris in convention with the Allies. Although several reservations, such as that with regard to the Monroe Doctrine, are likely to be voted by the Senate, the probabilities are that nothing will be done that will necessitate re-opening of the Peace Conference. That this forecast is correct is indicated by the vote on the Shantung issue.]

Reading Of Peace Treaty Interrupted By Debates

(American Press Wireless)

Washington, October 15.—The reading of the Treaty of Peace was resumed by the reading clerks of the United States Senate this morning. The Senate has completed 180 of the 450 sections of the documents.

Debates and oratorical efforts of the members of the Senate have interrupted the progress of the consideration of the document and it is not indicated that there will be any speeding up of the procedure in the future despite the fact that the body is now convening an hour earlier than usual.

Senator Lodge Urges Big Pacific Navy

(Reuter's Service)

Washington, October 14.—Speaking in the Senate, Senator Lodge, the Republican leader, vehemently denounced the Shantung provision of the peace treaty on the ground that Japan was building a Far Eastern Empire which would threaten the safety of the entire world.

Senator Lodge urged the maintenance of a superior navy in the Pacific as "the day will come when the United States will be involved in another great war to preserve civilisation."

League To Be Reality

Paris, October 14.—The League of Nations will became a reality within thirty days, the United States's delay in ratifying the Peace Treaty to the contrary notwithstanding.

The fact is that with the German Treaty effective, President Wilson, under the terms of the Treaty, must call the signatories together within three weeks to start the League going.

Ask For Instructions

The question of plebiscites seems to be the most important at the moment. Hence the American delegation has asked Washington for instructions, they taking the position that inasmuch as American official spokesmen negotiated, America is morally bound to participate in the plebiscites, such as that in Silesia, by sending troops there whether the Senate ratifies or rejects the Treaty. They say that the moral responsibility is all the more because the civil population is clamoring for the Americans.

And They Say America's Dry!

By Helen Williams

The California vineyardist is not nearly so gloomy at the present time as all the world expected him to be after July 1, for in spite of all the efforts of the prohibitionists, the juice of the succulent grape, in alcoholic form, is still holding its own in the United States.

According to Mr. C. A. Paulden, who is now in Shanghai in the interest of the California Associated Raisin Company, with offices at Connell Bros., the demand for green grapes has increased tremendously. So much so that the price of grapes has jumped from $16 to $40 a ton within the last year. There is talk of an association being formed to buy the grapes outright from the grower, and then the association will see to the reselling and shipping. The proverbial cloud, no bigger than a man's hand, is ever present, however, as there are not enough empty freight cars to carry the grapes east, for most of the demand is coming from east of the Mississippi.

Here's Another Factor

In the large Mideastern and Eastern cities there are millions of foreigners who have always been accustomed to having light wines with their meals. To them it is a part of their lives, and those who are from the Mediterranean and southern European regions are all able to make wine. Nothing daunted by the laws of this new home of theirs, which is intruding these same laws upon their ancient and time honored customs, they are now buying grapes and making their own wines. As a consequence, we need not be surprised if we suddenly see that a bill has been passed forbidding the cultivation of the grape.

The art of home wine making will no doubt reach a high standard in the near future, and I can readily see where Tony the banana man and his friends will become the most popular teachers in the United States, for if he can make his light wines at home, why cannot all America do the same? The Monday before John Smith is going to give a little Saturday evening party, he will probably slip around the corner and have a conference with this same Tony or his brother, at which conference he will gather most important information regarding the art of home brewing. The result of this will be that John Smith's friends will wander home early Sunday morning in the same happy and contented frame of mind that was taken as a matter of course after a Saturday night party, before the sad and serious days following July 1, 1919.

Puzzle Of The Raisin

The demand for raisins is also becoming greater. There is room for a question here. Is it because the American housewife is realising more and more the real food value of a raisin, or is there any truth in the rumor that a raisin dropped into a bottle of near beer, and left for twenty-four hours will result in a bottle of real beer? Whatever the reason, there is no question about the fact that grapes and raisins are being sold in tremendous quantities. According to Mr. Paulden, there are approximately more than a million tons a year raised in California, and where the price used to average about 2 cents a pound, it is now up around 16 cents a pound.

MAILS TO BRITISH ISLES

Mails for the United Kingdom marked "via Suez" will in future be sent direct, as opportunity offers, by steamers of the Blue Funnel and Japanese lines as well as by those of the P. & O. S. N. Co., according to an announcement made by the British Postmaster.

Letts Again Hold Riga After Driving Out Foe

Word To London From Finland Confirms Belief Soviet Rule In Russia Is Tottering

(Reuter's Service)

London, October 14.—The latest news from Riga is to the effect that the Lettish Government has returned to the city and is making a big effort to secure the co-operation of the other Baltic States against the Germans.

The situation, however, is very obscure, although it is now clear that Colonel Bermondt with his Russo-German army never captured the whole of Riga but only the suburbs south of the river from which he has now been driven out.

Colonel Bermondt seems to be playing a lone hand on behalf of the Baltic barons.

Soviet Losing Ground

London, October, 14.—Messages from Helsingfors confirm the impression prevalent in London that the position of the Soviet Government is extremely critical, owing to the advance of General Denikin who is under 200 miles from Moscow, which it is anticipated he will reach within a month.

The Bolshevists have been preparing for the evacuation of Moscow since the fall of Kursk. It is reported that Trotsky told a communist meeting that the Soviet troops could not stand a winter campaign.

Denikin Moving On Moscow

London, October 14.—General Denikin's offensive is now directed against Orel and Tula, both of which are heavily fortified. It is anticipated that if Tula falls, the people's commissaries will flee to Turkestan.

CHECKS IMPOSED UPON IMMIGRATION TO STATES

Committee Of Senate Favors Continuance Of Rules Introduced In War

(American Press Wireless)

Washington, October 15.—Legislation requiring all foreigners desiring to immigrate to the United States to submit satisfactory records to the American consular officers before the issuance of passports was voted favorably by the Committee on Immigration of the House of Representatives.

The favorable consideration came after testimony had been given before the members of the committee by Robert Lansing, Secretary of State, and other officials of the State Department, all of whom urged continued control of immigration such as existed in the United States during the war.

President Wilson Is Still Improving

Supplementary Report Issued By His Doctor Tells Of Constant Headaches

Washington, October 15.—President Wilson continues to improve despite constant headaches, according to official announcements today from Admiral Grayson, the President's physician.

STRIKE AT MARSEILLES NO NEARER SETTLEMENT

Trouble Due To Refusal To Reinstate Men Who Quit In Earlier Tie-Up

(Reuter's Service)

Marseilles October 14.—The shipping strike includes engineers, stewards, wireless operators and doctors. It is due to a refusal to reinstate some of the men who had previously struck.

American Labor Chief Samuel Gompers, Ill

Intends, However, To Return Shortly To Industrial Conference At Capital

(American Press Wireless)

Washington, October 15.—Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor, and the best known figure in American labor circles, is confined to his home by a nervous breakdown, according to reports issued by his secretary.

Mr. Gompers, however, expects to return to his duties at the National Industrial Conference within a few days.

No adjournment of the National Industrial conference, which is now in session in this city, will be sanctioned by President Wilson, according to announcements from the White House today, until the commission has exhausted all possible means of working out a solution for the present undustrial situation in the United States.

STRIKE NEGOTIATIONS TAKEN UP IN BRITAIN

Meetings In Accordance With Terms Of Settlement Are Being Arranged

(Reuter's Service)

London, October 14.—In accordance with the terms of the strike settlement the Railwaymen's Executive had an interview today with the Premier regarding the resumption of negotiations.

After the interview Mr. J. H. Thomas expressed his pleasure with the prevailing spirit and atmosphere of the meeting and the genuine desire on the part of both sides to effect a settlement.

DARDANELLES CAMPAIGN DISCUSSED BY FISHER

Sidelights On Men And Events Of War Told In 'Memories Of Admiral'

(Reuter's Service)

London, October 14.—The Times today publishes "Memories of Admiral Lord Fisher dealing with the Dardanelles Expedition." Lord Fisher declares that he alone opposed naval operations in the Dardanelles but that he remained at the Admiralty because he desired to see his large building program carried out.

He admits that there was frequent tension in those days between him and Lord Kitchener. He delivered an ultimatum to Lord Kitchener one day that if the Queen Elizabeth was not withdrawn from the Dardanelles he would leave the Admiralty the next day.

"It was lucky she did leave," adds Lord Fisher. "German submarines had been prowling around looking for her for a fortnight and neglecting all the other battleships." They finally blew up her wooden dummy thinking they had got her at last. Lord Fisher incidentally mentions that the British fleet of dummy battleships greatly confused the Germans.

The "Memories" which are written with great raciness contain numerous interesting opinions and sidelights on men and events. For example, Lord Fisher says that he forgives Lord Cromer for not inserting a certain precis on the Dardanelles in the report of the Dardanelles Commission because "in his prime he did me a good deed. I entreated him to cut a channel into Alexandria harbor deep enough for a dreadnought. He did it, although it cost a million and thus provided an incalculably advantageous base."

Lord Fisher hints that at one time there was a big scheme "to polish off not only every human soul in Heligoland and its surrounding fleet but every rabbit," by an invisible, scentless, deadly poison gas. He does not mention details of what stopped the plan.

Lord Fisher's description of Lord Kitchener is perhaps worth quoting:

"He was a great man," he says, "but a great deception, in as much as he could not do what people thought he could. Like Moses, he was a great commissariat officer, but he was not a Napoleon or a Moltke. He was a Carnot in excelsis, and the facile dupe of his own failings."

One Thing At A Time, Please

(From Our Own Correspondent)

Peking, October 14.—The Central Government is in receipt of word from its delegates at Paris that most of the representatives of the "Big Five" have shown themselves sympathetic towards China's desire for the abrogation of the rights of consular jurisdiction in China and that there is good reason to hope that this question will be settled in a manner favorable to this country as soon as the League of Nations opens its first session. The Chinese delegates have in the meantime approached the delegates of the "Big Five" for recognition of the two following desiderata:

(1) In the event that legal disputes arise between Chinese and foreigners the case, whether it be civil or criminal, shall come before a Chinese court for settlement whenever the defendant is a Chinese; and no foreign Consuls or other foreign representatives shall be permitted to interfere with the action of the Chinese court, nor shall "assessing" be allowed.

(2) Chinese courts shall be entitled to issue search warrants covering residences occupied by foreigners or residences located in foreign concessions and to deliver judgments without previous examination into the cases on the part of foreign Consuls and legal officials.

Nation-Wide Strike Of Coal Miners Is Called In America

No Settlement Announced In Steel Tie-Up But Pittsburg Mills Are Operating

(American Press Wireless)

Indianapolis, October 15.—The United Mine Workers of America at an executive session in this city issued an order calling for a strike of all mine workers employed in the bituminous coal mines of the United States to become effective at midnight on Friday, Oct. 31.

Steel Mills Operating

Pittsburgh, October 15.—The Pittsburgh district steel mills are operating more fully today than they have been at any time since the declaration of the steel workers' strike.

Gotham Trouble Easier

New York, October 15.—The Longshoremen's Union, comprising 15,000 workers, has voted to return to work. The Boatmen's Labor Union has returned all of its members to their duties, thus practically ending the waterfront strike.

Fiume Has Been Italian 17 Centuries, Is Claim

Pamphlet That Tells History Of The City And Defends Adventure Of d'Annunzio Received Here

We have received through the courtesy of Cav. de Rossi, Consul General for Italy, a most interesting pamphlet devoted to the cause of "The Italian National Revindications at the Congress of Peace." It is published by the Italian Home Defense Committee, of Rome, and deals with the questions of Fiume and Dalmatia. The question of Fiume is of special importance at this time owing to the bold adventure there of the famous Italian poet, d'Annunzio. All Italy, as near as we can judge, has been thrown into an uproar by the situation he has created, the Peace Council at Paris, apparently having put the matter of his ousting up to the Italians themselves. Italy's claim to Fiume is well set forth in the pamphlet with which we are dealing. And for the general information we herewith give it in full:

Adriatic Port's History

Fiume has been an Italian city for seventeen centuries. The ancient city of Tarsactica was built on the precise spot where Fiume stands today and it was destroyed in the year 800 by Charlemagne.

Like all other Italian cities of the Peninsular and Isles of Dalmatia, Fiume was a free commune and independent during the Middle Ages. Fiume has preserved this freedom up to today. The most ancient document in the municipal archives of Fiume is dated the 10th of January, 1449 and is written in Italian. After this date there is not a single document that is not written in Italian. Archbishops, grand dukes kings, the Venetian Republic, Napoleon I. and all the governments that had to negotiate with Fiume, always wrote their communications in Italian.

The public rights and independence of Fiume have been invariably maintained throughout twenty-two centuries. The freedom of the Commune of Fiume, included in the Civic Statute, was acknowledged in a document signed by Maria Theresa in 1779 and the Hungarian Governor in 1870, taking the oath in Italian, sworo to respect this Treaty, adding in Latin these eloquent words: Nihil de Vobis Sine Vobis.

Review Hungary's Efforts

The Hungarian Government tried, but without succeeding to hungarianise Fiume by means of immigration and tyranny. To obtain this they got a professor to invent Hungarian vocabularies for the Naval Academy. The Government refused to allow Fiume an Italian upper school and forbade the students of Fiume to frequent any other upper schools of the Austrian Empire. They opened a Hungarian professional school and forbade the Commune of Fiume to start an Italian one. They did not support the Italian elementary schools but they opened a Hungarian school there. Notwithstanding all of this 65 percent of the inhabitants of Fiume are Italian, 28 percent are Slavs, Croats and Serbs and 6 percent Hungarians.

The Italian nationality has been proved during the war by the patriotic and heroic conduct of its inhabitants, by the revolt against Austria in October, 1918, before the victory, by its repeated plebiscitary manifestations which have affected every nation. Buccari a small town near Fiume, celebrated by the entry of two small Italian motorboats (Gabriele d'Annunzio, the indefatigable defender of Quarnero and Dalmatia, was on board of one of them) according to the Austrian census has only 30 percent Italians. Today every single peasant in the envirous of Buccari knows how to speak Italian.

The German historian, Th. Mommsen, decided that Quarnero is the Oriental boundary of the tenth Italian region as established by Augustus. (Venetia et Histria). The Spanish historian Paolo Orosio in the 15th century A. D. and both the Arabian geographer Edisi and the Greek geographer Discleates in the 12th century, decided that the Italian boundaries reached Buccari east of Fiume. The defense walls of the city (vallum), built by the Romans to defend Istria and Quarnero, still exist. These walls follow the chain of mountains from Mount Nevoso (Schneeberg) and Mount Bittorai down to the sea, east of Buccari, and end at the Rock of St. Marcus, the name of which is thoroughly Venetian and Italian. At this rock end the Julian Alps, so called in honor of Julius Caesar, according to the orographic map of the Alps that surround Italy, published by the General Staff of the Kingdom of Sardinia in 1848; that is, three years before King Carl Albert declared the first independent war on Austria.

Walls Made Frontier

When the Roman defense walls (vallum) ceased to be used as fortifications, as the other vallum did in Pannonia, Dacia, Germany, Alsace and England (the walls of Hadrian and Septimius Severus) they became the frontier between two races.

Fiume, from 1208 on, belonged to the diocese of Pola, which is under the jurisdiction of the Patriarch of Venice. All the churches of Istria and Dalmatia were under the authority of the Venetian Patriarch for Nine Centuries. It was only in 1866 after Venice was given back to Italy that Emperor Francis Joseph refused to acknowledge the authority of the Venetian Patriarch over Fiume, Istria and Dalmatia.

The celebrated French geographers Malte Brun and Eliseo Reclus call the city of Fiume Italian. The German historian Nissen acknowledges Mount Bittorai, east of Buccari, to be the Italian frontier. The German geographer Krobs affirms that Fiume is open

PEKING AND TOKIO MUST MAKE THEM PUBLIC, HE SAYS

Northern Delegate Insists Southerners Now Must Discuss Peace

'NOW YOU SEE IT!'

'We're Ready To Disclose Every Convention,' Says Wang

SPLIT IS DENIED

Also It Is Denied That There Is Any Agreement With Tokio

The method of disclosing the secret treaties and loan agreements concluded between China and Japan must be decided by Mr. Wang Yi-tang, head of the Northern Peace Delegation, who now has copies of the documents in his possession. Mr. Tang Shao-yi will not aid Mr. Wang in making the decision and will not even reply to the letter received yesterday from the chief delegate of the North, in which Mr. Wang requested Mr. Tang to receive Northern delegates this morning on "important business."

"On May 13, the Southern delegation demanded the publication through official channels of all secret treaties and loan agreements," Mr. Tang told representatives of THE CHINA PRESS yesterday. "The South further stipulated that these agreements, after publication by the foreign offices at Peking and Tokio, should be cancelled. The situation remains the same as it did on May 13 when the conference broke up."

Doubts Sincerity Of North

Mr. Tang sees no possibility of resuming the conference. He does not believe that the North is sincere. Mr. Wang told THE CHINA PRESS yesterday that the conference would soon be resumed. Both leaders said that there was no split so far as they knew between Tokio and Peking. Mr. Wang insisted that the treaties and agreements could be published by Peking without consultation with Tokio. "If Tokio and Peking have made an agreement to release the contents of the documents, I do not know of it," he said. Both, in other words, wash their hands either with regard to an agreement or a split. What has happened has happened, that's all.

Mr. Wang Yi-tang admits (or boasts) that he has copies of all secret treaties and loan agreements, and that he will publish them as soon as he gets a reply from Mr. Tang. When questioned as to his decision, if Mr. Tang should not suggest a method, Mr. Wang said, "But the chief delegate from the South will certainly suggest the method of disclosure as it was he who made the suggestion that the documents be published." This was shortly before four o'clock.

"Some Are Shameful" Tang Says

An hour later Mr. Tang told the reporters that not only would he refuse to suggest how the documents should be published but that he would not officially discuss them with any member of the Northern deputation.

Mr. Tang told reporters that Mr. Wang could not as a matter of fact, have copies of all secret treaties and loan agreements. "Some of them are too shameful," he said.

Both delegates talked freely. They are at a crisis. They agreed on but one point—that Peking and Tokio had not split. Mr. Tang insisted that if the treaties and agreements are to be published, Tokio will have given consent. Mr. Wang intimated that an agreement was beyond his knowledge.

The head delegate for the North and his secretary, Mr. S. T. Tsao, received THE CHINA PRESS men at the offices at Hardoon's Gardens. Mr. Wang was very enthusiastic about receiving the copies of the secret documents—it was an evidence of good faith on the part of the North.

South Must Decide

"Mr. Tang Shao-yi must decide how they are to be released for publication," said Mr. Wang.

"The demand originated with Mr. Tang; it will certainly be courtesy for the Northern delegation to confer with him as to the method of response to his request."

"If Mr. Tang refuses to suggest a method, what will you do?" asked the reporter.

"But he can not refuse; the documents were sent here in response to one of eight demands he made as a basis for peace," answered Mr. Wang.

Several weeks ago it was announced that the Military Government in Canton had instructed Mr. Tang Shao-yi to refuse to negotiate with Mr. Wang Yi-tang. Since then Mr. Tang has resigned and returned his seal to Canton. The reporter again requested Mr. Wang to suggest an alternative—how shall the documents be published if Mr. Tang will have nothing to do with their release?

Mr. Wang reiterated that the issue was squarely up to the Southern delegation.

Has All Treaties

"We have copies of every secret treaty and loan agreement; they have been sent here because the Southern delegation demanded them; they will all be published as soon as we hear from Mr. Tang," Mr. Wang asserted.

"Did an official bring the documents from Peking?" asked the reporter and Mr. Wang replied, "No, they came by post—registered, of course."

"Even copies of the railway loan agreements are included in the documents from Peking," the reporters were told.

"But can they be published without consulting Tokio?" was the next question.

"China is an independent nation and is free to act."

"Then no agreement has been entered into between Tokio and Peking?"

"Such an agreement is not necessary."

"When two nations are co-signatories of treaties, is it not international courtesy for one to consult the other before publishing a treaty—particularly a secret treaty?"

No Split, Says Wang

"The days of secret diplomacy are past. Secret treaties were thrust into the discard at the peace conference in Paris. This is the day of open diplomacy. I do not think that there will be any interference from Japan."

"It appears that there is a split between Peking and Tokio when the Chinese Government proposes to disclose secret agreements to which Japan is a party when the latter country is not consulted," pressed the reporter.

"There is no split," asserted Mr. Wang.

"Then there is some sort of understanding or agreement?"

"I asked Peking for copies of the secret treaties and loan agreements and they complied with my request. Whether or not the Peking Government has or had any understanding with Tokio before the documents were sent to Shanghai, I do not know."

Mr. Wang expressed the belief that the peace conference would soon resume sessions.

"Are you prepared to make further concessions if the South is not satisfied to co-operate in the publication of the secret treaties?" asked the interviewers.

"The Southern delegates can not refuse to co-operate," was the answer.

To Resume Conference

Again Mr. Wang expressed the belief that the peace conference would resume its sessions and even suggested that a decision to publish secret treaties might be made jointly, that they would be released for publication possibly from the conference.

"Will the press be admitted to the sessions of the conference?" was the next question.

"That, too, must be decided after consultation with Mr. Tang Shao-yi."

The status of Mr. Tang as chief of the Southern delegation is not questioned by the North as no official announcement has been received at Peking of Mr. Tang's resignation, Mr. Wang said.

Southern Delegate Talks

From Hardoon's Gardens the reporters went to the house of Mr. Tang Shao-yi on Range Road. On his desk was a letter from Mr. Wang Yi-tang. It read: "To the attention of the Southern delegate, Tang: I am sending Mr. Wang Ko-ming and other delegates of the Central Government to your residence tomorrow morning between ten and eleven o'clock. They come on important business. Will you kindly allow them to discuss the matter with you. Yours, etc., Wang Yi-tang."

Mr. Tang then told the newspaper men that he could not receive the delegates officially and that he would not reply to the letter. It came by post. Had a messenger brought the communication, it would have been returned, he said.

"The Northern delegation knows that on May 13 at the German Club I communicated eight demands to Mr. Chu Chu-chien, then head of the Northern delegation," said Mr. Tang. "Included in these were requests for publication by the Tokio and Peking foreign offices of all secret treaties and agreements and their subsequent cancellation. Since then there has been no attempt made by Peking to secure such action by Tokio."

Business Of Foreign Office

"I have nothing to do with the publication. Disclosures should be made through proper official channels. Such business should be done by the Foreign Office. And certainly the Southern delegation cannot cancel these agreements."

"If the Northern delegation is sincere, the government which it represents will go right back to May 13 when the demands were made and the conference became deadlocked."

"Since then Peking has not only refrained from making advances to Tokio to secure cancellation of secret treaties and loan agreements, but Peking is still borrowing Japanese money," Mr. Tang declared.

"Do you think that Mr. Wang Yi-tang has copies of all secret treaties and loan agreements?" asked the reporter.

"No—not all of them—some of them are too shameful ever to be published," Mr. Tang calmly answered.

When the reporters suggested that Peking might have split with Tokio, that popular agitation—the student movement—might have influenced Northern leaders, Mr. Tang smiled.

No Change Of Heart

"There is no split," he said. "There is no change in the attitude at Peking in spite of universal disapproval of the Central Government's actions."

"But is it not significant that three pro-Japanese officials were forced from office by students and merchants throughout the country?" the reporter asked.

"Tsao Ju-lin, Lu Chung-yu and Chang Chung-hsiang were ostensibly driven from office but they are just as active and powerful as ever—behind the screen," said Mr. Tang.

"Then you see little hope in popular agitation?"

"The young men of China will be China's salvation."

Going back to the sessions last April and May at the former German Club, Mr. Tang recited instances to show evidences of bad faith on the part of the Northern delegation and to point out that Mr. Chu Chu-chien was not even in the confidence of Peking.

Arms Were Delivered

"While the conference was in session—on the sixth of April—a shipment of arms was delivered to Peking by the Japanese," Mr. Tang declared. I heard the news three days later and knew it when I went to resume the conferences.

"I did not tell the rest of the Southern delegates; I swallowed the pill until we were hopelessly deadlocked and then informed the Northern representatives of what I knew.

"I then accused them of insincerity; tried to impress them that while we were attempting to come to peace terms in Shanghai, the Government which they represented was purchasing arms to kill Chinese—their brothers and cousins in Hunan and Shanse—even while we sat around a peace table and talked.

"Tears came to the eyes of several Northern delegates," said Mr. Tang.

The Southern delegate declared again and again that the first Northern deputation was not sincere in its efforts for peace and he questions the sincerity of Mr. Wang and the present delegates of the North.

Attacks Peking Administration

"The first delegation denied knowledge of the existence of any secret treaties; now comes Mr. Wang with a proposition that I should suggest how these treaties should be published, when they only can be disclosed through proper official channels," Mr. Tang said.

Mr. Tang then attacked the administration at Peking. He asserted that revenue from customs and salt surpluses, railways, exchange and Boxer indemnities is sufficient, even without land taxes and provincial contributions. "It is not necessary for Peking to borrow continually," he said.

He criticised the administration of the railways and condemned the Government for not giving proper attention to the rolling stock.

"There is very little possibility of a resumption of the peace conference," Mr. Tang concluded.

The Opera

It was announced last night that beginning with Sunday, the operatic performances will be started at 8:30 p.m. both at the Lyceum and Olympic theaters. The matinees will burst forth at 2:30 p.m. Patrons are requested to be in their seats at the hours named. The change is made for the benefit of the opera-goers who have to get home the same night and go to work the next day. So far as the singers are concerned they don't care if they sing all night.

Last night's "Carmen" was the most highly finished production of the Russian Company since their arrival in Shanghai. Much of this due to the naturalness of the opera itself, to the opportune lightening of the plot with delicate musical devices.

Bizet's score, played as it was under Mr. Vasilieff, is of the very few that could, if necessary, stand by itself as music with neither stage nor scenery. To this was added excellent staging, dresses, and dances, whilst the high level of principals and chorus alike had the evenness throughout of first class opera.

The gradual change of relations between Carmen and Jose whom she fascinates only to thwart, ruin and drive finally to madness and murder were magnificently reproduced in action and voice by Miss Burskaya and Mr. Preobragensky.

Round these two characters gathered the actors whose work was all so good that distinctions are scarcely necessary. Escamillo, the toreador (Mr. Ulianoff), Zuniga (Mr. Magsky), Michaela (Miss Sasonzova) all contributed to this highly polished performance of the ever-popular opera.

That all these parts, as well as the demands upon the two chief actors, need great vocal powers is a commonplace. A word should be said of the smugglers' quintet for its technical perfection. Carmen, Dancairo (Mr. Busanovsky), Remendado (Mr. Svetloff), Frasquita (Miss Ivanova) and Mercedes (Miss Losieva) held us enthralled.

The fourth act reached its climax with an intensity that made a magnificent close before the full and enthusiastic house. The care and work put into this opera by the company raises the highest expectations for the long list of works still to be presented.

Lakme At Today's Matinee

The play to be given at the matinee this afternoon is Lakme, an opera in three acts. The scene is in India, and the plot is taken from the story Le Mariage de Loti by Goudinet and Gille. The music, which is by Leo Delibes, is beautiful, and the principal numbers are exquisite compositions. The story resembles in some points both Aida and Africaine.

In Act 1 a garden scene in India is introduced. Nilakantha, Lakme's father, hates the English invaders and resists their presence in India. Gerald and Frederic, English officers, while sauntering with some English ladies, venture on sacred ground near Nilakantha's temple, and when rebuked they all depart but Gerald, who remains to sketch some Oriental jewels which Lakme had left in the garden. He is struck with the daintiness of the gems and tries to picture the unknown beauty to whom they belong. Hearing someone approaching he hides himself in the shrubbery. Lakme enters and lays flowers at the feet of an idol.

Act II shows a public square, lined with Chinese and Indian shops and bazaars, with English visitors strolling about. Nilakantha, disguised as a beggar, is seeking the intruder, whom he has sworn to kill.

A hut in a tropical forest is the scene in the 3rd act, to which Gerald has been taken by Lakme after being stabbed by Nilakantha in the streets. As the days pass and Gerald recovers his strength, he seems to forget all else but his love for the Brahmin maiden, but one day while she is absent, his friend Frederic finds him and urges him to return to his duty. Gerald promises to be at his post but asks for a few moments in which to say good-bye to Lakme. When Lakme returns she finds Gerald changed. She sees by his face that he means to go back to his friends, and in despair she eats some flowers of the deadly stramonium tree and dies in his arms.

Tosca Tonight

Tosca is an Italian opera in three parts. The scenes are laid in Rome in June, 1800. Giacomo Puccini was the composes of this, his fifth opera, which is by far the most popular of his achievements, with the exception perhaps of Mme. Butterfly. The plot is gloomy and tragic, but is relieved somewhat by the musical setting, which confirmed Puccini's place in the first rank of modern operatic composers. The three acts in the opera are crowded with sensational events and highly dramatic situations.

The first scene occurs in the church of San Andrea, where the painter, Mario Cavaradossi, is at work on the mural decorations. Here he has been accustomed to meet his fiance, the beautiful Floria Tosca, a singer.

One day a political refugee, Angelotti, who has just escaped from the castle, suddenly appears, recognises his friend Cavaradossi, and asks his assistance. The painter gives him food and sends him to his villa, just as Tosca arrives.

The police enter in search of the prisoner, who has been traced to the church. Caravadossi is suspected as an accomplice, and Scarpia, who is secretly in love with Tosca, plans his ruin, with a view to removing from his path a dangerous rival.

In the second act Scarpia orders Mario's arrest. Mario is sent to prison, and Scarpia tells Tosca that unless she looks with favor on him, her lover shall within an hour.

In Act III a mock execution Mario takes place as planned, through Scarpia's treachery proves to be a real one, and Mario is killed. Tosca afterward throws herself from the castle parapet as they attempt to arrest her for Scarpia's murder.

Gay Night Life In Paris Believed Thing Of Past

Passing Of 'Anastasia' And Other Restrictions Imposed By War Is Celebrated

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, Oct. 15.—Wireless from Lyons: Paris, Oct. 14.—The first day of the state of peace in France was the occasion for general rejoicing by the press over the death of "Anastasia" as the Censor is called after the patron saint. Military control, not only of the press, but of all measures of control over travelers crossing the frontiers of France, supervision of ports and importation of publications, passed today to the civilian authorities.

State requisition of railways terminates and the military authorities lose jurisdiction over certain crimes and misdemeanors with the right of search. The occasion provokes further comment on the resumption of diplomatic relations between France and Germany.

The Secretary of the Peace Conference is still foremost among those whose names are mentioned as Ambassador to Germany, and the well-informed Echo de Paris says it has confirmation of his selection for the post and expects that the German Government will at once be asked to approve his nomination.

Baron von Lessner, now German representative at Versailles, who has already made a visit to the former German Embassy in the Rue de Lille, is supposed to be the choice of the Berlin Government for the post of Charge d'Affaires pending the nomination of an Ambassador.

France, also, will probably appoint a Charge d'Affaires in Berlin temporarily, and the name most mentioned for this post is Mr. Clinchant, who is at present French Charge d'Affaires at Berne.

The question has been raised whether the sumptuous German Embassy should be considered as coming under the category of German property abroad, which according to the peace terms must be applied to payment of reparation.

The appointment of an Administrator of the Saar Valley is also imminent, and for this post the name of Mr. Celepeties, former Governor of Tunis and now Ambassador at Madrid, is mentioned.

The lifting of the state of siege and the restoring of the enforcement of municipal regulations to the police will enable restaurants and cafes in Paris to remain open till one o'clock in the morning but the question is much discussed whether in practice it will be profitable, for Parisians during the war, more than five years have acquired the habit of retiring early and waiters will be quite satisfied to have them continue this good habit, as the night does not yield the same revenue as before the war, while the eight hour law will complicate the situation by requiring restaurants and cafes to engage additional crews.

Nationalist Aims In Turkey Supported

Counter Revolution Brought Into European Area By New Development

(Reuter's Service)

Constantinople, October 13.—The Turkish Nationalist leaders have agreed to support Aliriza Pasha's Government which has accepted the Nationalists' views.

Party Gains Two Towns

Paris, Oct. 14.—The addition of two further large Turkish cities, Brusa and Adrianople, to the Nationalist movement, reported here in the press today from Constantinople, marks the last stage in the eastward advance of the Turkish rebels and brings the counter-revolution into European Turkey.

This event may have the immediate consequence of the signing of a truce between the Turkish Government and Mustapha Kenel's insurgents. The opinion is expressed in Conference circles that with Mustapha Kenel's troops quartered in Brusa and Adrianople, just the other side of Constantinople there is really nothing else for the contending parties to do but reach an accord.

Tea Export Duties Here Are Remitted

Export duty on Chinese tea of all varieties to be shipped abroad is remitted for a period of two years from October 10, according to an announcement made yesterday by the Commissioner of Customs.

Merchants importing tea from coast ports which is intended for re-export abroad will have to deposit at the Customs House a bond for the full export and half the coast trade duties payable. If the tea is not re-exported within one year from date of importation into Shanghai, the terms of the bond will be enforced.

Chinese To Give Farewell Affair To American Consul

Plans for a farewell dinner in honor of Mr. Thomas Sammons, United States Consul-General who leaves for Melbourne November 4, are being formulated by six Chinese local organisations. Although no definite date has been settled for the affair, it has been decided to hold the banquet at the Han Yeh Ping Club, 2 Bubbling Well Road.

A silver vase will be presented by 35 directors of the Chinese General Chamber of Commerce at the function. The organisations giving the dinner are the two Chinese Chambers of Commerce, the Y.M.C.A., the Western Returned Student's Club, the Society for Constructive Endeavor and the World's Students' Federation.

Another Farewell Dinner

Applications for reservations for the dinner to be given to United States Consuls-General Thomas Sammons and Edwin S. Cunningham should be sent to Mr. D. A. Wilson, 6 Kiukiang Road.

Blanks were sent out yesterday to all members of the American Association of China and the American Chamber of Commerce, the two organisations giving the dinner on Thursday evening, Oct. 30, as a farewell to Mr. Sammons and a welcome to Mr. Cunningham. There will be dancing after the dinner.

French Will Succeed British In Syria

Outline Of Policy That Will Be Followed Is Given By Commander

(Reuter's Service)

Paris, October 13.—General Gouraub, who has recently been appointed to the command of the French troops in Syria, interviewed by a representative of the Agence Havas, stated that he would relieve the British troops by French troops, chiefly colonial, in Syria.

Two Empress Boats Are Due To Arrive

Two Empress liners will be at Woosung Monday. The Empress of Russia arrives with 193 passengers for Shanghai late Sunday night and the Empress of Japan on Monday afternoon.

The Empress of Russia is due at Tsingtau this morning at 6 o'clock. On account of the late arrival here Sunday night the passengers will not be landed until the next morning. The vessel will leave again Monday evening for Manila and Hongkong, passengers taking the tender from the Customs Jetty at 2 p.m.

When the Empress of Japan leaves on Tuesday it will be for Hongkong direct. Passengers will leave on the tender for this trip at 10 a.m. Tuesday.

Want Exportation Of Rice Stopped

Eight local organisations yesterday addressed a telegram to the Military and Civil Governors of Kiangsu, asking definite legislation to prohibit the exportation of rice in view of the high market price of the cereal.

The organisations are the Kiangsu Educational Association, the Shanghai City Educational Association, the Western Returned Students' Union, the Chinese Overseas Club, the Chinese Christians' Union, the World's Chinese Students' Federation, the Nantao Fire Brigade and the Vocational Educational Association of China.

NEW POST OFFICES

Fifty-two new post offices were opened in China in the month of July, according to the seventh supplement to the Chinese Postal Guide just published. The supplement names each and gives its classification. There is also a list of alterations in existing post offices.

The Very Reverend A. J. Walker is indisposed and it is unlikely that he will be able to be present at the services at Holy Trinity Cathedral tomorrow. He was taken ill on Wednesday afternoon and has had to keep to his room since then.

Mr. T. J. Eldridge. A shoal is described in the Tungchow Channel together with the tendency there of the channel itself to move eastwards. Around the Cooper bank, navigators are cautioned that the Kiushan Point channel has shoaled and they must proceed with care. The Pitman-King channel is recommended as much more suitable for deep-draught vessels.

Reds Still Winning World Series Title

Pat Moran's Team Gets Another Game, The Eighth, Says Wireless

Cincinnati is still winning the world's baseball championship, according to the American Wireless. The latest message says that Pat Moran and his Reds won the eighth game of the series by a score of 10-5 thus giving rise to the belief that instead of the old "four out of seven" arrangement, the series goes to the team that wins five out of nine games. Dispatches received to date give the scores of but three games. Chicago won the third, 3-0; Cincinnati won the fifth, 5-0 and the eighth, 10-5.

The dispatches are at least consistent. Cincinnati has won the series in every message. Here is the one received last night:

Chicago, October 15.—Cincinnati won the world's baseball championship for 1919 by defeating the Chicago White Sox in the eighth game of the series by a score of 10-5.

German CrownPrince Again Is Heard From

Was Clear To Him, He Asserts, In Fall Of 1914 Teutons Could Not Win

(Reuter's Service)

Berlin, October 13. — The Taegliche Runoschau publishes a letter from the German ex-Crown Prince saying that the battle of the Marne was only such a grave failure owing to the then army leaders losing their heads.

He says that it was clear to him in the autumn of 1914 that the war could no longer be brought to a successful end by military plans and that he then wished to conclude peace with France.

He further complains of the lack of resolute political leadership in Germany during the war and the failure to make peace with Great Britain on the basis of an economic compromise.

Fiume Italian City, Is Claimed

on the Istrian side and closed on the Dalmatian side. Another German geographer, Lukas, claims the Italian frontier to be east of the Fiumara, a small river on the left side of which stands Fiume.

Even the dead proclaim loudly and strongly the Italian nationality of Fiume. An Italian priest, who visited the cemetery of Fiume in December 1918, examined the inscriptions on 250 tombs and found that 247 were in Italian and the other 3 were in Slav.

(Letter published in the Gazzetta di Venezia and the Popolo di Italia 4-1-19).

The author does not dwell long on Fiume because the Italian nationality of this city is as evident as the English nationality of London, the French of Paris, American of New York, the gentine of Buenos Aires, Brazilian of San Paolo, altho each one of these capitals several hundred thousands, if more than a million, foreign habitants. It is therefore necessary to insist on the in putable Italian nationality Fiume, the city that wants to united again to Italy.

Fight Films At Apollo

Georges Carpentier's first fight in the ring since returning from the French army is to be shown in Pathe pictures at the Apollo Theater next week for three days beginning Monday. The French champion is shown winning from Dick Smith, light-heavyweight champion and holder of the Lonsdale belt.

HALLOWE'EN PARTY

A Hallowe'en Party is announced by the American Song Service for Friday, October 31, at the Masonic Hall. Those who remember the successful affair of 1917 will certainly come, those not present before ought not to miss this one. The committee is planning games for all, an interesting program and plenty of refreshments.

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

Don't Poison Baby.

FORTY YEARS AGO almost every mother thought her child must have paregoric or laudanum to make it sleep. These drugs will produce sleep, and a few drops too many will produce the sleep from which there is no waking. Many are the children who have been killed or whose health has been ruined for life by paragoric, laudanum and morphine, each of which is a narcotic product of opium. Druggists are prohibited from selling either of the narcotics named to children at all, or to anybody without labeling them "poison." The definition of "narcotic" is: "A medicine which relieves pain and produces sleep, but which in poisonous doses produces stupor, coma, convulsions and death." The taste and smell of medicines containing opium are disguised, and sold under the names of "Drops," "Cordials," "Soothing Syrups," etc. You should not permit any medicine to be given to your children without you or your physician knowing of what it is composed. Castoria does not contain narcotics.

The signature of Chas. H. Fletcher guarantees genuine Castoria

Physicians Recommend Castoria.

"I have frequently prescribed Castoria for common ailments of children with good results."
W. A. CRANDALL, M. D., Buffalo, N. Y.

"I find your Castoria is very beneficial in the treatment of children's ailments."
F. DAVIS, M. D., Chicago, Ill.

"As the father of thirteen children I certainly know something about your great medicine and, aside from my own family experience, I have, in my years of practice found Castoria a popular and efficient remedy in almost every home."
WM. J. MCCRANN, M. D., Omaha, Neb.

"I object to what are called patent medicines, where the maker alone knows what stuff is put in them, but I know the formula of your Castoria and advise its use in proper cases. I judge it to be a very useful, as well as harmless family medicine."
N. B. SIZER, M. D., Brooklyn, N. Y.

In Use For Over 30 Years.
THE CENTAUR COMPANY, NEW YORK CITY.

Banking Service with AMERICA —direct and personal

EXPORTERS or importers now engaged in, or thinking of, trade with America would do well to consider not only the special nature of our facilities, but also the personal interest we take in every one of our customers' transactions.

First of all, we offer direct banking service—without intermediary dealings, or unnecessary delays.

Equally important is our personal service. Every transaction is followed through, both here and in America, by our own representatives with a personal interest, the value of which is evident in the service rendered.

May we talk with you about Amer ica?

Kiushan Point (Round) Channel Shoaling.

Pitman-King Channel to be marked for night navigation.

NOTICE is hereby given that a recent survey of the Channels around the Cooper Bank, Yangtze River, shows that the Kiushan Point (Round) Channel has shoaled to 18 feet in the vicinity of Kiushan Point, and also that this channel in general is unsuitable for deep-draught navigation. In the Pitman-King Channel a least depth of 23 feet was found on the Pitman-King Crossing at the western entrance to this channel.

As the Pitman-King Channel now carries the greatest through depth and is more suited and direct for navigation, it is intended that on or about the 28th October, 1919, the following alterations will be made in the marking of this channel so as to make it suitable for navigation by day and night:—

The Kiushan Bank Beacon will be discontinued.

A Light-beacon, to be known as the Pitman Beacon, will be established on the northern coast of Pitman-King Island, to mark a point where vessels make or leave the steep-to coast of the Island when navigating between the south-western end of Kiushan Bank and the shoal off the northerly point of Pitman-King Island. This beacon, which will be situated about 2.4 miles N. 32° W., of Pitman-King Surveying Beacon, will exhibit two White Unclassed Lights hoisted vertically and 6 feet apart.

The Cooper Bank Light-boat will be moved about 2 cables S. 16° W., from its present position and will then mark the southeastern extremity of the Cooper Bank. Its characteristics will not be changed.

A light-beacon, to be known as the Channel Beacon, will be established on the western point of Pitman-King Island. This beacon, which will be a pole surmounted by a black spherical day-mark, will exhibit a 7th Order, Fixed, White Light.

The Pitman-King Crossing Upper and Lower Buoys will be discontinued.

A Light-boat, to be known as the Crossing Lightboat, will be moored in about 19 feet of water, on the southern side of the Pitman-King Crossing. This Light-boat will exhibit 2 White, Unclassed Lights hoisted vertically and 6 feet apart.

A red and black vertically striped buoy, to be known as the Spit Buoy will be moored off the western end of the spit on the northern side of the Pitman-King Crossing.

The Big Tree Light-boat will be moved about 1.2 miles, S. 45° W., from its present position. It will then be moored in about 48 feet of water on the southern side of the channel in the western approach to the Pitman-King Crossing its characteristics remaining unchanged.

CAUTION:—Until the above alterations have been made vessels navigating the Kiushan Point (Round) Channel should proceed with great caution.

All bearings given are Magnetic and depths are these of low water of extraordinary spring tides.

NOTICE is hereby given that a preliminary survey of the Tungchow Channel, Yangtze River, shows that the shoal on the western side of the channel between the Corner and Bend Buoys has extended to the eastward, and the channel in the vicinity has also shifted eastwards.

Steps will be taken, as soon as possible, to readjust the positions of the buoys in this vicinity to the new direction of the channel. Until these alterations have been made it is recommended that navigators steer carefully from buoy to buoy.

IMPARTIAL & PROGRESSIVE

SHANGHAI, OCTOBER 18, 1919

The Shantung Amendment Lost

THE vote in the United States Senate rejecting the Shantung amendment will come as a disappointment to the people of China. It indicates that there has been a change of sentiment in the Senate since President Wilson made his appeal direct to the people. It will be recalled that when the Foreign Relations Committee of the Senate reached the Shantung award in the Treaty of Peace a sharp division of opinion developed. The committee finally recommended to the Senate that the former German rights in Shantung, which the Treaty of Peace gave to Japan, should be given to China instead.

President Wilson declared that if the Senate followed this recommendation its action would necessitate reopening the Peace Conference and doing over the Peace Treaty. This would give everybody, including the Central Powers, a chance to come in with new pleas; there would be new complications leading to no one could say where, and the world would become more chaotic than ever, through stoppage of its effort to right itself and get back on a peace basis. Failing to move the Senate, he decided to appeal directly to the American public. This decision led to his making the tour which ended in his physical breakdown. The action of the Senate now, in voting 55 to 35, to let the Shantung award remain untouched shows that the President's fight was not in vain.

So far as the President himself is concerned, he has repeatedly declared his own dissatisfaction with the Treaty of Peace, but he has also said in the same breath that it was the best that could be got, considering the general situation in Europe and the secret treaties which had been made between the Allies during the progress of the war. Among these secret treaties was the one dealing with Shantung. Great Britain and France had agreed to a treaty under the terms of which the German rights in Shantung were to be given to Japan. When this treaty was produced in Paris here was nothing that President Wilson could do towards abrogating it and there was nothing that Britain and France could do—unless Japan herself agreed to give up the German rights she had acquired. This Japan refused to do. She has, however, given her verbal pledge that she will restore Kiaochau to China. Therefore, China will, in the end, be the gainer by that much. She will get back some of the land she had previously lost. And meantime, under the general terms of the Treaty and Covenant she will be protected in the future against all external aggression. Under that same Covenant China now has the chance to be captain of her own destiny. Will she take it?

The Treaty Power And The American Constitution

By T. R. Jernigan

IF the debates of the convention which framed the American constitution be carefully studied it will become evident that the members did not desire the conclusion of many treaties and for that reason made the process of treaty conclusion difficult.

Under the Articles of Confederation the treaty-making power was vested in a majority of nine states in Congress. In some of the early drafts of the Constitution the power was vested in Congress, which meant that both the Senate and House must concur in the ratification before a treaty could be effective. But later it was decided to invest the Senate with the power of ratification, and as it was argued, that treaty-making was properly an executive function, requiring a national agency to offset the especial state interest of the Senate, the President was finally added, and given the constitutional authority to negotiate the terms only as a means of simplification, but with no authority to bind the Government without first obtaining the approval of the Senate.

The hope of the framers of the Constitution that there should be few treaties has scarcely been realised, for from the foundation of the Government to August, 1914, there have been 595 treaties, an average of more than four a year, and for the twentieth century, as many as fifteen a year, or a treaty ratified every three weeks.

It was Jefferson and not Washington who first warned the American Government against entering into "entangling alliances," Washington was broader than Jefferson in his views of a national danger and the duty to meet it. He too opposed alliances that might endanger the peace of his country, but he was not opposed to an alliance which safeguarded it.

In the days of the two great men named, treaties were more of a political character than they are at present. In this century treaties are generally regulative, with the tendency to make equal treatment rather than special privilege their object, and the geographic position of the United States, with its new idea of neutrality and complete impartiality, rather than passive alliance, has tended to give its treaties an especially non-political character. The change in the character of the treaties at present negotiated is perhaps indicated by the tendency to substitute for "treaty" the word "convention," a treaty implying a contract whereas a convention is an instrument regulating some specific subject.

And there are other developments in international agreements which are quite as remarkable in character and of these may be mentioned the formulating principles of international law, or establishing international unions as regulating agencies of communication, transportation and exchange. The attempt to codify international law by general agreement was first undertaken by the Congress of Vienna in 1815, but it did not become important until after the Declaration of Paris in 1856, followed by the Geneva, St Petersburg and Hague conventions.

And although the number of treaties has increased it is seen that their predominent character has changed from political control to codes of law or administrative regulation providing for international co-operation in a smaller or wider circle. The principle is meant to establish legal order embracing all persons and governmental agencies within the contracting state, and the necessity for the establishment and enforcement of such a principle is clearly stated by Mr. Elihu Root as follows: "If the law of nations is to be binding, if the decisions of tribunals charged with the application of that law to international controversies are to be respected, there must be a change in theory, and violations of the law of such a character as to threaten the peace and order of the community of nations must be deemed to be a violation of the rights of every civilised nation to have the law maintained and a legal injury to every nation."

It would seem that the principle stated by Mr. Root receives a definite sanction in the Covenant of the League of Nations accepted by the Paris Peace Conference on April 28, 1919, which recognise the legal responsibility of all parties to employ effective measures in defense of its terms. And this principle evidently gives rise in importance to treaties establishing a legal order wider than the state, and of treaties creating a general responsibility for the security of the world order. It makes the relations of treaties to the constitutional law of states a practical question.

Mr. Root can rely for support on the opinion of no less an authority than Daniel Webster, who thought it a sufficient answer, that America was not interested in the injustice of Europe, to say, "that we are one of the nations of the earth; that we have an interest, therefore, in the preservation of that system of national law and national intercourse which has heretofore subsisted so beneficially for us all . . . We have as clear an interest in international law as individuals have in the laws of society."

The two eminent jurists just named, the one dead, the other alive, apparently did not apprehend any danger to the constitution of their country should it be obligated to assist in the establishment of legal order wider than within itself and assume a general responsibility for the security of order in the world. There is no difference of opinion among American jurists, that the treaty-making power of their Government is subject to constitutional limitations, and a treaty in conflict with the constitution is void and may be so declared by the courts in the same manner as a statute. Mr. Marcy, while Secretary of State, said: "The constitution is to prevail over a treaty where the provisions of the one come in conflict with the other. It would be difficult to find a reputable lawyer in this country who would not yield a ready assent to this proposition."

The writer has not read the decision of any court in which it was decided that a treaty was void because it came in conflict with the constitution, but on the contrary the courts have been liberal in their interpretation of the constitution so as to permit the application of a treaty. The accepted ruling is, that while the treaty-making power is subject to constitutional limitations enforceable by the courts, a treaty would be regarded as valid unless it violated an express prohibition of the Constitution, while an act of Congress can only be regarded as valid when it is in pursuance of an express grant of power or a power readily implied therefrom.

The Constitution is the organic law of the American Government. Without it there would be no such government as is functioning in that capacity. Congress, the President, and the Supreme Court, all, owe their existence to the Constitution, being created by it, and have no powers except the powers directly given or reasonably implied by the organic instrument to which they owe their creation. And it is the history of the Government that neither Congress, the President, nor the Supreme Court can legally act except within the prescribed and defined powers of the Constitution. There is no authority for negotiating and ratifying a treaty in conflict with the Constitution. A treaty proposing to operate outside of the Constitution would be ipso facto void and a nullity, and without reservation on the necessity of reservations.

Japanese English Papers

The Japan Chronicle

We notice that Tientsin has its Japanese paper in English now, and the Dairen official leaflet considers that, in exercising its talent for invective on the heads of those deplorable foreigners belonging to a "certain nation" who criticise the doings of Japan in China, it is not likely to get much sympathy from foreigners. The Seoul organ says little by way of criticism, but remarks that the Tientsin paper disclaims any official or propaganda uses. The wondering reader may inquire what, then, it is for. Do independent Japanese journalists really think that the foreign residents of Far Eastern ports want to read English as they write it and to learn the facts as they choose to present them? Of all the futility in the world these English papers published in Japanese interests are about the most pitiful.

Wilson On Bolshevism

"Opposition," declared the President, in a speech at Kansas City, "is the specialty of those who are Bolshevistically inclined," adding, "I am not comparing any of my respected colleagues to Bolshevists, but I am merely pointing out that the Bolshevistic spirit lacks every element of constructive opposition; they have destroyed everything and they have proposed nothing."

Religion Before And After War

Asked To Name Five Cardinal Sins, Soldiers Give Illuminating Answers

Social studies of the war. By Elmer T. Clark, Litt. D. 282 pages. Published by the George H. Doran Company.

Dr. Clark has worked over and expanded in this volume the interesting articles which he wrote for The Tribune, The St. Louis Republic and some of the religious newspapers of the United States. He went to the front twice for extended periods—once as a correspondent and once as an agent of the Young Men's Christian Association. His purpose was to study, both among the soldiers and in the principal cities of Great Britain and France, the effects of the war on morals and religion. He expresses his opinions with extreme openness and confidence. There may be some exaggeration in them for that reason. But they challenge attention not only because they differ widely from the reports of most other sociological observers and are based on a sincere and well fortified conviction.

Dr. Clark says that the war has greatly disorganised the social structure in Europe and led to a widespread relaxation of moral standards—especially among women. But this is an almost inevitable result of great and long wars. As to the effect of war conditions on religious faith and practice, experience is less uniform. Many wars have been accompanied by religious revivals. The soldier, certainly, living in the face of death, has awakened in him all the spirituality of which he is capable. Dr. Clark continually testifies to the universality of religious feeling at the front. Practically every soldier carried a New Testament with him. The question an acute observer had to solve was how far this sentiment was related to the orthodox faith held and preached by the various organised churches.

The author sees only a distant relation between the soldier's religion and that of the pulpits. The soldier has a "natural religion." Is it nearer to Christianity or paganism? At least it differs widely from the conventional orthodox beliefs back home. Here is a striking passage:

"The welfare workers who ha[redacted] been preaching and moralising t[redacted] the boys had concerned themselve[redacted] with what they regarded as th[redacted] cardinal sins: profanity, gambling[redacted] drunkenness and sexual immoral[redacted] ity. But while they harped o[redacted] these things constantly they[redacted] secured little interest on the par[redacted] of the soldiers themselves. A[redacted] last cards were circulated amon[redacted] multiplied thousands of the me[redacted] and they were asked to designat[redacted] what they regarded as the fiv[redacted] most repulsive sins. The answer[redacted] were illuminating. Neithe[redacted] drunkenness nor gambling, no[redacted] profanity, nor vice figured in the[redacted] replies. Heading the list was[redacted] cowardice. Then came selfishness. And the other three in order were hypocrisy, disloyalty and meanness. It will be noted that these are all sins of the spirit, and when these old rooks, as we used to call them, named these as the worst of all sins they displayed a greater profundity, a better grasp of the fundamentals of the moral life, than any of the professional moralists who had presumed to lecture them."

Profanity was not a sin at all at the front—only a habit. Dr. Clark tells of a service which he was conducting at the front. There was a fervent atmosphere of spirituality. When the men started to sing a hymn they couldn't get together. The leader stopped suddenly and said: "Oh hell! That is too damned low!" But the men took the remark as a matter of fact. The author insists that "it in no way spoiled the spirit of the occasion."

It is Dr. Clark's opinion that the church gained ground in only one country as a result of the war. That country was France. And the reason was that France did not exempt her clergy from military service. The experiences of the war, the author contends, have greatly shaken the influence or organised religion, and that influence can be regained only by a heroic effort to adjust old creeds to new spiritual ideas and impulses.

Japan And Tsingtao

From Japan's Viewpoint

The China Advertiser of Tientsin, can no longer repress its indignation at the state of affairs which confronts Japan. It finds that Japan would be wrong in handing Kiaochow back to China at the moment. It says:

A formal declaration having been made by the Japanese Government, the question of restoring Tsingtao to China is now practically settled. From the beginning there was no intention on the part of Japan to keep the port, but the Chinese distrusting Japan's sincerity did and said things quite uncomplimentary towards her. On the face of such strange behavior of the untoward people, we would not have been at all surprised had she changed her mind and announced to retain the war trophy secured by her at a great sacrifice of men and money.

But is it a wise policy for Japan to stand by her word and return the ex-German leased territory now, when the latter is behaving in a very unfriendly manner? It must be remembered that Japan made public, time and again, her willingness to restore Tsingtao to China for the sole desire of cementing her relations with China. Can she now attain the end by faithfully fulfilling her given promise? China holds that by the right of her having joined the Allies she is entitled to the recovery of the Kiaochow Territory, and demand that it should be given back to he in the state in which it now stands She completely ignores the fac[redacted] that without Japan's [redacted] in a high-handed manner. The authorities tried to restrain them, only to infuriate them. On the night of August 30, they surged about the Police Commissioner's Office loudly demanding the release of arrested students and the freedom of speech. The Japanese Consul-General who tried to drive past the vicinity was molested by them and was nearly insulted.

In the early hours of the following morning, the local correspondent of the Osaka Asahi, accompanied by the Secretary of the Japanese Chamber of Commerce were surrounded by the mob-students, and despite his protest explaining who he was, was knocked down, beaten and stamped upon until he lost consciousness.

Since then, the situation has apparently been ameliorated through the strong protest of the Japanese Consul-General, but a strong undercurrent of ill feeling still exists, which may break out in violence at any moment. Seditious circulars are secretly circulated to fan anti-Japanese sentiment among the people. What is true in Tientsin is true in every trading port. "Down with the Japanese," is the universal cry in China.

At such a juncture, if Japan would hand back Tsingtao to China because she pledged herself to do so, her kindness would be misinterpreted by the Chinese. Instead of feeling grateful, they would swell in their conceit and imagine that they forced Japan to [redacted] to utilise the subject as a political lever with which to overthrow their opponent.

China is an independent country and has vitality and stamina enough to settle any question with a country without receiving the support of a third party, to say the least of the American Republican Senators. The less they declaim about the Shantung question, the quicker the case would be brought to termination. We solemnly warn those indiscreet speakers that if they keep on inciting China, they will soon see China thrown into the turmoil of another revolution and the people steeped in the pool of great miseries.

Daniel De Leon

Interest In Life Of Man Who Invented Soviet

Daniel de Leon: The man and his work. A Symposium Published by the National Executive Committee of the Socialist Labor Party. New York.

Daniel De Leon is probably the stormiest figure in the troubled and obscure history of the American Socialist and radical labor movement. His career as lecturer, agitator and editor was marked by a series of furious factional fights over various questions of Socialist principle and practice. He denounced Debs and Haywood, Morris Millquit and Samuel Gompers for different reasons, but with equal vehemence. He quarrelled with the regular Socialists because of their opportunism, with the I. W. W. because of their early predilection for "lead pipe" methods of action. However, he always retained control of a small band of devotees organised in the Socialist Labor party, and when he died in 1914 he was mourned by them as the ablest American exponent of the true faith of Marx.

Naturally, the present book, written by a few faithful friends and admirers, is more eulogistic than critical. The weak points of De Leon's character—his arrogance, his intolerance, his inability to take an immediate practical view of political and industrial problems—are glossed over or denied. On the other hand, the authors of the symposium emphasise, and perhaps exaggerate, his keen and piercing intellect, and his austere integrity in the midst of a crowd of cheap adventurers

Notwithstanding the obvious infirmities of his temperament and character, it is difficult to escape the conclusion that De Leon is one of the very few really powerful minds that have appeared in the American radical movement. He is acknowledged as the original author of the Soviet idea by no less an authority than Nikolai Lenine, who was astonished to find the whole Bolshevik system of representation based on economic function, rather than on geographical location, worked out in one of De Leon's pamphlets.

Under favorable circumstances De Leon's energy and ability might well have made him a notable historical figure. But, living in a country and an age that had no taste for revolution, he was doomed to lead a half-comic, half-pathetic existence, absorbed in petty squabbles over the "control" of a party which could scarcely muster enough votes to gain a legal place on the ballot and writing denunciations of the capitalists and appeals to the workers which neither capitalists nor workers ever read. In addition to its biographical sketches of De Leon, the book contains a full if somewhat biased description of the cross-currents in American radicalism during the past three decades.

Hall's Distemper has led the way to a new era in house decoration—the era of brighter, cleaner and healthier homes.

It is the most durable of all decorations, lasting for years with freshness unimpaired, whereas wall-papers deteriorate from the first day by fading and accumulating dust and dirt.

Hall's Distemper is a thorough disinfectant, and is applied directly upon the wall, forming a hard surface, from which dust and dirt may be "spring-cleaned" by lightly sponging with warm water.

Hall's Distemper (Registered Trade Mark) is a unique preparation and has the recommendation of leading sanitary authorities, architects, and decorators everywhere.

The Strange Romance Of A Huckleberry Bush

By Garrett P. Serviss
(Eminent Astronomer And Writer on Problems of Scientic Interest)

Here is the romance of a huckleberry plant, a thousand years old and eight acres big.

Besides its age and size, this remarkable plant has for a special attraction the fact that it is the larger of the only two specimens of its species—the wild box huckleberry—now known to be in existence.

This I state on the authority of Frederick V. Coville, the botanist, who avers that the least that American naturalists can do for this "charming little thousand-year-old lady of the forest," in return for what she has done for them, is to try to keep her living forever. Her home is on the westward slope of a timbered hill in Perry County, Pennsylvania.

A thousand years seems to be an underestimate of the real age of this horizon-seeking plant, whose pleasure is found not in towering each century a little nearer the sky, like the giant Sequoia, but in hugging close to the soil, and stretching farther and farther toward the receding and deceptive edges of the world.

Mr. Coville estimates that not less than 1,200 years must have elapsed since the baby plant began to expand from its cradle-point like a wave on water. Give it time enough, and take away obstacles, and this wonderful individual might be pictured as embracing the continent. Its light blue berries are as bright and its dark green leaves as reluctant at the circumference as at the center.

Age doth not wither it, nor distance weary its unending youth. At every step it renews its strength. It gives birth to no seedings. After the most painstaking search, Nr. Coville found not one. Its environment invites it to perpetuate its kind in the ordinary way, but its individual nature forbids. It would rather fill the world with its own personal self than with its offspring. It produces seeds, but they are sterile, or at best of exceedingly feeble germinating power, and it does not respond to self-pollination.

We find exemplifications of the principle of this all-grasping, self-centered life in the social, political, and industrial worlds. Examples will occur to everybody. Carried to the extreme the principle would cover a planet with a single inhabitant, a Briareus whose arms would reach round the globe and come back to look up with their own shoulders. In this view that creeping "little old lady of the forest" induces a shudder, for monstrosity is a quality not of multitude but of over-size.

If that same eight-acre patch were covered by thousands of intermingled huckleberry plants, each having its own independent footstock, there would be no suggestion of uncanniness, but when you find that it is all one single plant you cannot regard it without a start and a tingle of the nerves, behind which even a kind of fear may lurk.

The orator can face without trepidation a thousand pairs of eyes, for he knows that their power does not surpass that of the strongest individual brain behind them; but put all those eyes into a single gigantic head—and then!

Notwithstanding the facts that this strange huckleberry plant in Pennsylvania produces no offspring and that, with a single exception, it is the only wild plant of its kind that has been found now living, efforts are being made, with some promise of success, to perpetuate the species by cross-fertilisation.

For this purpose Mr. Coville has hunted up the other of the two living wild box huckleberry plants and has found it, or rediscovered it, near Candy, Delaware. Its existence had long before been known, but afterward its precise location was forgotten. It required considerable detective skill, based upon special scientific knowledge—a hunt something like that of a skilful prospector for a lost mine—to run down the plant. When found it proved to be relatively small, covering an area only twenty feet square.

Like its greater sister it lives to itself alone, producing no seedlings. But by cross-pollination of the flowers of the two plants they now have offspring in Washington, which may indefinitely perpetuate the race.

Only five localities have ever been known in which this plant grew, and, as already said, but two of these remain. Mr. Coville thinks that the species was killed by some fungus or insect, and that the two existing plants have grown from chance seeds scattered by birds. At least seventy-three years ago Spencer F. Baird discovered the old lady in Pennsylvania, and thrilled Asa Gray with an account of the plant. But it does not appear that he suspected that it was a single individual.

Now Comes Rude Awakening Of Father

By Frances Duncan Manning

Anything that will wake up father from his soporific unconcern as to the education and upbringing of his children is not an unmixed evil, even when it is so startling an awakener as the breaking of his pipe or laying violent hands on his tobacco pouch. He can buy another pipe; he can get a burglar alarm for his tobacco pouch—and he may stay awake.

Hitherto the care, education and training of the children has been considered exclusively the business of mother—their food, their clothing, their morals and manners, their playmates and schools and teachers, concerning these incessant and plentiful advice has been heaped—all, all, upon the mother. There are mothers' clubs, mothers' meetings, schools of mothercraft. And father? His job has been to decorate the background and to pay bills. Whether this unobtrusive position was chosen by him or forced upon him by the ultraconscientiousness of mother, who hadn't enough to occupy her unless she was getting into a spiritual perspiration over mothering, I am not sure. At all events such, in the majority of cases, was father's position in the American home. Not an altogether proud position, but an extremely comfortable one. From this he has been rudely aroused by the W. C. T. U.

Designs on his purse wouldn't have been so startling; besides, father probably has a subconscious habit of keeping track of that; but the attack on his pipe was wholly unexpected.

Dr. Green, of Philadelphia, so the story goes, was unaware of his danger and sat smoking his evening pipe in much content. To him came his small daughter, who informed him he might no longer have the usual childish salute to parents. The astonished father wondered why and was given the memory gem "Unfit to Kiss," which, after the good old fashion, the child had learned for recitation in school. The irate parent sought the teacher, then the school board, demanding that the offending book wherein his daughter had found that "gem" be thrown out of school. Other fathers, also sinful smokers, joined the belligerent doctor and sought the Board of Education.

"How must their cheeks have flamed with red,
How did their hearts with choler beat;
We can imagine what they said,
We can imagine—not repeat!"

At all events, the book, placed in the schools by the well meaning ladies of the W. C. T. U., was thrown out. No longer does the small Philadelphian learn that papa, if he smokes, is "Unfit to Kiss!" So much for the power of the aroused parent.

Of course, the question of whether or not father is fit to kiss because of his tobacco using propensities is not for the state to decide, nor for the Board of Education. It is a matter which was absolutely up to mother before she married him. If she considered father good enough to marry then, unquestionably for little Edwin and little Angelina, he should be good enough to kiss goodnight. And if a woman holds the opinions of the mephitic book then, obviously, she should not marry a smoker and, unimpeded, she can train her children in her beliefs.

That smoking is injurious to boys and girls no one will deny, and the laws against the sale of tobacco to minors cannot be too strict. At the same time, most women feel that a man, being a little lower than the angels, has to have some vices, and are inclined to be a little suspicious of those monuments of masculine virtue in whom no such peccadilloes are to be observed. Besides, a man looks so utterly content with a pipe and a book and an easy chair that few wives, even if members of the W. C. T. U., have the heart to disturb him. Any wise mother prefers that her son smoke about the house rather than have him dodging surreptitiously behind corners and into alleyways to try the cigarettes that to his young fancy represent a real badge of manhood. It's a phase of adolescence that passes. This I believe is a very general attitude of women. Drink is another matter and has caused, especially to women, too much misery to be so lightly regarded. Although one may not have personally suffered, yet few have been untouched by the tragedies it has brought.

The really useful effect of the tobacco alarum is that father has waked up to the extent to which the schools are used for propaganda purposes, and he has seen how easy it is for him when aroused, as was the Philadelphia parent, to organise his Soviet of Wrathful Parents and cause even a regal board of education to mend its ways.

The W. C. T. U. ladies have a perfect right to agitate for the cessation of the use of tobacco if they think it harmful. They may characterise the users as "Unfit to Kiss." That, surely is a matter of personal choice for the members of the W. C. T. U. No one is insisting on their "Comin' Thro' the Rye." But men and women, fathers and mothers, may and should know what is being taught to their children in the schools, public or private, and if they don't like it, have the teaching altered. No more stimulating tonic for our school system could be devised than a little careful supervision—not by paid supervisors, but by interested parents. Teachers and even august boards of education are, after all, public servants and should be subject to recall. And if it be to the interest of the community that some of these, instead of sitting on the board, walk the plank, that change should be effected.

If Dr. Green's experience leads other fathers to find out what their children are being taught and to renew in the city the old-time rural practice of "visiting the schools," the experience will be valuable. We are indebted to the Temperance Union ladies for waking him up and to the worthy physician for playing Paul Revere to the sleeping community.

Memories

(From Poetry)

The Long Hill

I must have passed the crest a while ago
And now I am going down.
Strange to have crossed the crest and not to know—
But the brambles were always catching the hem of my gown.

All the morning I thought how proud it would be
To stand there straight as a queen—
Wrapped in the wind and the sun, with the world under me.
But the air was dull, there was little I could have seen.

It was nearly level along the beaten track
And the brambles caught in my gown—
But it's no use now to think of turning back,
The rest of the way will be only going down.

Spring Torrents

Will it always be like this until I am dead?
Every spring must I bear it all again—
With the first red haze of the budding maple boughs,
The first sweet-smelling rain?

Oh, I am like a rock in the rising river
Where the flooded water breaks with a low call,
Like a rock that knows the cry of the waters.
And can not answer at all.

What Do I Care?

What do I care, in the dreams and the languor of spring.
That my songs do not show me at all?
For they are a fragrance, and I am a flint and a fire;
I am an answer, they are only a call.

What do I care—for love will be over so soon—
Let my heart have its say, and my mind stand idly by.
For my mind is proud, and strong enough to be silent—
It is my heart that makes my songs, not I.

It Is Not A Word

It is not a word spoken—
Few words are said,
Nor even a look of the eyes,
Nor a bend of the head;
But only a hush of the heart
That has too much to keep,
Only memories waking
That slept so light a sleep.

Song

Let it be forgotten, as a flower is forgotten,
Forgotten as a fire that once was singing gold.
Let it be forgotten forever and ever—
Time is a kind friend, he will make us old.

If any one one asks, say it was forgotten,
Long and long ago—
As a flower, as a fire, as a hushed footfall
In a long forgotten snow.

NOTICE

Messrs. CROSSE & BLACKWELL much regret that for the first time for a hundred years war conditions prevent many of their products being shipped to China. They much appreciate the letters they are receiving, and in reply would state that it is fully recognised here that under the circumstances of life in China the absence of English delicacies and foods is a very real hardship.

Messrs. CROSSE & BLACKWELL will take care that not a day shall be lost in forwarding supplies when a return to more normal conditions permits. In the meantime they trust that those who have been accustomed to rely on their products will be good enough to accept this explanation.

Siccawei Weather Report

16.—Moderate continental anticyclone, from the Yangtsze Valley to Lake Baikal, to the E. of which a snowfall occurs. The typhoon of the China Sea shows a tendency to recurve, before reaching the coast and to return to the Pacific. The one reported S. of Guam makes distinct progress towards N.W. or W.N.W. The long series of fine days continues, here and in the Valley; warm temperature exceeding the normal means.

17.—Banks of low fog at the early hours. Pressure a little below the average. Fine morning. Light Westerly breezes.

Hankow Market

Hankow, October 17, 1919.

Finance and Money Market

A few bills were offering, but little business was done. There was a small demand for Sterling and Gold Dollars. Taels T.T. on Shanghai remained steady at 96.75, but declined to 96.7 on the 6th inst, and closed firm with some Chinese demand. Dollars opened at 71.4—71.6 buyers and sellers respectively, and closed unchanged. Interest 18 percent. Changsha exchange: 26.

Imports

Piece Goods. The market is quite firm, but there is little doing this week on account of the Mid Autumn Festival. Clearances are fairly good.

Yarn. Prices are very firm and demand brisk. 16s Wuchang Yarn is now quoted at Tls. 212, a remarkably high price.

Exports

The market for all produce remains quiet and no business of importance was done during the week under review.
